Maria Montessori – Collected Works

Maria Montessori (1870–1952) became the first woman physician in Italy. Her interest in children and education led her to open a children's school for under six-year-olds, called the „casa dei bambini“, on the outskirts of Rome in 1907. Montessori put into practice her theory that children have a natural „tendency towards elevation“, and created an environment for self-education and self-realization, with remarkable success. The pedagogy of Maria Montessori is one of the most widely spread and internationally highly valued concepts of „New Education“

The Editor

Dr. Harald Ludwig was Professor of Educational Studies with emphasis on New Education/Montessori Pedagogy. For many years he headed the teaching and research centre for Montessori Pedagogy at the University of Muenster (Germany). Today Prof. Ludwig is Co-editor of the German „Montessori“-magazine and of the international Montessori journal „Communications“. He is also engaged in international lecturing activities and publishing work.

The following scholars belong to his editorial team: Prof. Dr. Christian Fischer (University of Muenster), Associate Professor Dr. Michael Klein-Landeck (University of Hamburg) and Prof. Dr. Volker Ladenthin (University of Bonn).

The publication of individual volumes was taken on by educational theorists from Germany, Austria and Switzerland.

Collected Works

The 21 volumes of Montessori's Collected Works will be the first such academic edition worldwide and thus represent a unique scientific publication.

They present new translations of all the texts by Dr. Montessori published until today, as well as a portion of her extensive previously unpublished writings. Introductions elucidate the editorial guidelines and introduce the reader to the work of Maria Montessori. Footnotes and appendices contain comments and additional passages from earlier editions, thus providing an accurate picture of the development of Montessori's pedagogical ideas and showing the numerous modifications she made on her basic work over the years.

Every volume owns an extensive bibliography and an index. An entire register (Volume 21) will provide an adequate access to this edition of the Collected Works.
